Uncontaminated water, air and soil are the basic needs of all beings to pursue their lives. Studies conducted so far have demonstrated that we will have to face the outcomes of the increasing global warming and pollution in the future.

Global warming, caused by the increasing amount and volume of the greenhouse gasses due to industrial, agricultural and energy-related productions shows us it's face through climate change, drought, desertification, imbalances in rainfall, glacier melting, rises in sea levels , floods, storms, increase in flood damages, tornados and many other meteorological events.
